Commercial Club's Value In Developing Home Trade.

PRODUCER OF GOOD RESULTS.

Found Efficient In Civic Improvement,
Advertising Towns and Procuring
New Manufactories and Business Houses—Trade Leagues' Methods.

As a means of procuring home trade and civic improvement the commercial club is meeting with ever increasing favor. It is found efficient in uniting home sentiment, in gaining local advantages, in advertising the town, in going after new manufactories and business houses and in sending out scouting parties for trade. Organization is the key to civic success. The difference between animate and inanimate matter is that one is organic, the other inorganic. This is also the difference between cosmos and chaos. The beginning of better things in a vast number of cities and towns has dated from the organization of hustling commercial clubs. We are in an age of co-operation, and the community that does not make use of this principle is handicapped in the race.

I have before me the reports of three commercial clubs in widely separated parts of the country. They are selected as types for the reason that they represent different lines of activity. The three of them together do not fill all the wide field that an organization of this sort may occupy. Indeed, it is impossible to indicate this entire field in detail or to lay down any hard and fast limits, as each town has its own needs and its own best way of reaching results. But, speaking generally, the experience of one town will coincide with that of others of similar size, surroundings and resources. Organization, hustle, unity of purpose, intelligent advertising and keeping eternally at it are necessary in all. These results can best be achieved through a commercial club. It need not necessarily bear that name, but it must be a board of trade, merchant association, civic improvement league, or whatever name that appeals to the community, but under ter, other cities underselling her in her own immediate territory. It was then that the chamber of commerce took up the question of water transportation, and, although one boat was lost by fire, it persisted until today under the stimulus of reduced rates Charleston has an encouraging wholesale trade, one house selling in fifteen states.

DENVER'S RUBBISH CAN.

Sanitary and Useful Appliance For Keeping Refuse Within Bounds.

To help in keeping a town clean receptacles should be provided for loose papers and refuse. Denver uses a rubbish can, the invention of its highway commissioner, Sam Phillips. The can itself is a very simple affair and stands thirty-six inches high, with sides of nineteen inches each. The height makes it easy for foot passengers to drop in their waste as they pass. Adjustable feet are under each corner, so the can, which is designed to be attached to a street post, may be permitted to adjust itself to the pitch of that post or to the slant of the walk. Thus it may be kept always in a primly upright position. Within the can is a large sack, fastened to hooks on the top, but swinging clear of the walk. This sack is hung on hooks directly under the removable top, so arranged that when the top is down and locked the sack cannot be removed. The movable top is really a hopper through which the waste passes to the receptacle sack within. The sack can be removed only when the hopper top is unlocked and put to one side. This is to prevent any but those authorized from removing the sacks or any considerable part of the contents. Of course as the hopper is kept open to facilitate the depositing of rubbish it is within the possibilities that the curious may inspect the contents or a part of them.

The sanitary idea is carried out by having perforations in the bottom of the sack to permit the escape of moisture, and this, together with the arrangement for the free circulation of air through the can, which has an open bottom, keeps the contents as nearly dry as possible. An objection urged that, the waste being very inflammable, danger would be incurred by throwing of cigars and of course, to fit to local conditions. The first of the reports referred to is from Kansas City, Mo., where the commercial club recently sent out 100 members to canvass contiguous territory for trade. The band was called trade winners and was on the road a full week, invading the three states of Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri. Scores of towns were visited, and because of judicious advance advertising the train bearing the boomers was met by large crowds at practically every stop.

One novel feature of the crusade was the prominence of the social side. The trade winners were canny and knew that if they could enlist the women and children their battle was more than half won. So they armed themselves with 10,000 boxes of bonbons and went forth seeking not those whom they might devour, but those that would do the devouring themselves. They had no trouble in locating victims. Possibly here is the explanation of the large crowds at the stations. The fame of those bonbons had gone ahead. This method of campaigning is on the old principle that molasses catches more flies than vinegar. Candy catches more trade than oratory.

That the women of the various towns visited entered into the spirit of the occasion was shown at the town of Triplett, where several pretty girls went about pinning bouquets on the boomers, each bearing the label, "For the Handsomest Man on the Train."

In view of the fact that a number were thus decorated, while others were not, a coldness sprang up which caused several men merely to grunt when they spoke the next morning. One badge bore the legend, "For the Handsomest Fat Man on the Train," but that is now rather a distinction in keeping with White House styles.

The second report is from Bridgeton, N. J. Bridgeton is a small city in south Jersey, the county seat of Cumberland county, where the great glass and textile mills are located. It has recently organized a commercial league, opened permanent headquarters and started a campaign of publicity. It will cover not only the field of soliciting new enterprises and home trade, but will take up the work of improving and beautifying the city. It will also consider municipal problems, one being that of the establishment of a municipal electric lighting plant in place of the privately owned one now in existence. That Bridgeton is up to date is shown by the recent adoption of the "Galveston plan" in electing its city council.

The third report is from Charleston, S. C., where through the efforts of the chamber of commerce in opening river navigation the city has developed rapidly as a distributing and wholesale center. On the advent of railroads into Charleston river navigation was gradually abandoned and at one time had practically disappeared. As a result of railroad rates Charleston became impossible as a distributing cen-

CLEANING UP CAMPAIGN.

Why It Pays to Get the Support of the School Children.

The summer cleaning season is bringing its usual good results on every hand. The various neighborhood improvement societies are active. Trees have been planted. Vacant lots have been cleared of their winter's accumulations. Individual citizens have been advised and encouraged regarding betterments about the home. The men of the street cleaning department are making their semiannual visit to the outlying districts. Gutters are being scraped and openings to sewers are being uncovered. All of this means more healthful conditions of life as well as more pleasing surroundings, so far as the eye is concerned.

The Oak Park folks have shown wisdom in enlisting the interested cooperation of the school children. The labor of the youngsters was effective in picking up papers and other unsightly things. A group of boys and girls properly encouraged can accomplish a great deal in the course of a busy hour or two. But there is a more important consideration yet. School children make a lot of litter. If they take lunches to school it is easy to fall into the careless habit of scattering papers and boxes wherever they eat. Under such conditions they seldom appreciate the amount of labor that is required to clean up after them.

It is a good thing, therefore, to get the support of the children in a cleaning up campaign. It makes them more thoughtful when the temptation to make litter comes. It helps in their training toward interest in matters of civic concern. An energetic movement for neighborhood cleanliness always has far-reaching influences whose significance may not be recognized at the time. Now is the time for such activity. It is essential to health. It means greater satisfaction and enjoyment in a few weeks. It has distinct educational value in the direction of better citizenship.—Chicago Tribune.

Public and Private Lawns.

So long as our home owners persist in baring their private grounds to the passerby in a way that is "distinctly American" we would suggest that they at least plant some screen plantation between the front and back yards. All too many show green grass in front and rubbish barrels and litter of every description in the rear, both seen from the street. Our next stage in development along this line may be a house we can turn inside out, so that furniture, library, etc., may be staged for the public.—Los Angeles Times.

GRANGE BUSINESS.

Fire Insurance an Important Consideration.

Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Farm Property Insured in Grange Mutual Companies at Small Cost—Some Interesting Facts.

The reports from the various counties at the state grange meeting show that many granges in New York are doing considerable in a business way for the benefit of their members, particularly in insurance. We glean the following facts from the reports of the delegates which appear in the published proceedings recently issued:

The Westchester-Putnam Fire Relief association carries over $450,000 in insurance.

Cortland County Fire Relief association has 1,237 policies in force, carrying $2,734,275.

The Patrons' Fire Insurance company of Cayuga county carries nearly $3,000,000 insurance.

Clinton and Essex Patrons' Insurance company reports over 1,600 policies, carrying $3,075,000 in insurance.

The Patrons' Fire Relief association of Tompkins county carries nearly $3,000,000 and is working to the satisfaction of its patrons.

The Patrons' Fire Insurance company of Otsego county carries $410,000 in risks at about half the cost of the old line companies.

St. Lawrence county has a membership of over 5,500 in thirty-five granges. Their fire relief association carries $10,000,000 of insurance.

Genesee County Patrons' Relief association is carrying over 1,700 policies, representing $3,900,000. The assessment last year was $1 on the thousand.

Broome county has two grange stores, doing a business of $15,000 to $20,000 a year. Binghamton grange, in that county, did a $15,000 business in coal, feed and grass seed last year.

In Clinton county the Patrons' Fire Insurance company carries risks of over $3,000,000, and the cost of insurance is about $2.75 per thousand, of which only 50 cents per thousand was for expenses.

In Columbia county one grange (German town) did a purchasing business of over $15,000 last year. The Columbia and Dutchess Insurance company had 2,700 policies in force Jan. 1, carrying $6,705,750 of insurance.

Out of the thirty-three granges in Steuben county ten own their own grange halls. The Patrons' Fire Insurance company, including also Livingston, carries $3,800,000, and the rate last year was $1.81 per thousand.

The Wayne County Fire Relief association is a strong feature of the Order in that county. The company now carries $8,253,437 in insurance in that county. The Pomona grange of Wayne has 800 members. Palmyra grange of that county has a $16,000 grange building.

The largest fire insurance association in the state is that of Jefferson county, which also does a business in Lewis county. On Jan. 1 it reported risks amounting to $14,108,992, of which over $10,000,000 is in Jefferson county. The assessment is only about $1 per thousand per year.

Monroe county, with a membership of 844 in its Pomona and 4,840 members in the county in subordinate granges, reports insurance business amounting to $7,908,316 on 3,325 policies. The losses last year were very large, being $16,248. The greatest trouble was the small boy with the match.

In Orange county the Ulster and Orange County Fire Relief association carries $4,000,000 insurance. In the seven years of its existence only one assessment of $1 per thousand has been necessary. The subordinate granges in Orange county own real estate assessed at $34,000 and did a commercial business of over $300,000 the past year.

Co-operation for Rural Improvement.

A personal letter to the writer from J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic association, with headquarters at Harrisburg, Pa., conveys the information that this association will be glad to co-operate with the grange on matters pertaining to rural improvement. The association has a section on rural improvement, headed by Dean Davenport of the University of Illinois. Mr. McFarland says, "There are many ways in which suggestions going through the grange would be effective, and the association will be glad to co-operate with you heartily and in detailed effort."

Grange Trophy Cup.

At the last session of the Ohio state grange a resolution was adopted instructing the executive committee to offer a trophy cup to the grange making the best exhibit of corn at the annual meeting of the Ohio Corn Improvement association, the award to be made according to rules of the association.

State Master Laylin of Ohio had several broken ribs and many bruises from a runaway accident a few weeks ago.

FIRE ON THE YALE.

L. B. Metcalf of Brookline, Mass., Is Seriously Burned.

New York, N. Y.—Fire on the Metropolitan coast liner Yale, discovered while she was on her way from Boston to New York, terrified scores of passengers early Tuesday. One man was badly burned. For a time a panic was imminent, and the passengers, men and women swarmed from their staterooms to the decks in their night clothes. The majority of them remained up till the Yale docked later in the day, near Christopher street.

As soon as the vessel was unloaded she was hurried to the Erie basin. According to the officials of the Metropolitan line, this move was not the result of the fire, but had previously been planned, its object being to have the ship's hull scraped.

The injured man is Louis B. Metcalf, a salesman, of 148, University road, Brookline, Mass. The blaze started in his stateroom. He was badly burned about the head, face and arms, and was pulled from the burning room just in time to save his life. The ship's physician treated him, and on the arrival of the liner at her pier in North river he was hurried to St. Vincent's hospital.

The fire started shortly after Metcalf, who had left an early call, had been awakened. A score of the crew rushed to his room, which was all in flames. Metcalf, it is believed, had set the bedclothing afire in lighting a cigarette. The shouting of orders, the injured man's screams and the shuffling of the crew as they set to work to quench the flames awakened the other passengers and in a few minutes the decks were crowded with frightened men and women.

When finally the fire was under control and at last extinguished the excitement was too great to permit much returning to bed. Many of them had dressed while the fire was still in progress, prepared to take to the boats, which had been held in readiness. The trip to New York was completed at top speed.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO.

Struck By Car On Pond St. and Right Leg Broken.

Boston, Mass.—Katie Mckey, 23 years old, a maid in the employ of William C. Appleton at his residence, 42 Eliot street, Jamaica Plain, was knocked down and run over by an automobile Tuesday evening, when crossing Pond street, near Eliot street, Jamaica Plain. She received a compound fracture of the right leg and probably internal injuries. She was taken to the Faulkner hospital where she died early Wednesday morning.

AIDED MME. NORDICA.

John L. Shorey, Aged Lynn Schoolmaster, Dead.

Lynn, Mass.—John Langdon Shorey, an old Lynn schoolmaster and 40 years ago one of Boston's successful publishers, who was also primarily responsible for the development of Mme. Lillian Nordica's voice, died at his home, 11 Broadway, after a long illness.

He was 89 years old and was born in Jonesboro, Me., where he lived until he reached the age of 16. At that time he came to Lynn to make his fortune, and after doing manual labor for a time, his educational attainments were appreciated and he was made a school teacher. He was stationed at various schools in different sections of the city and was the master of what was commonly known as the Dye house village school.

In the late 60's he gave up school teaching and went to Boston, where he engaged in the book business. He placed Sargent's Fifth Reader upon the market, contributed much towards making a success of the work and then became a publisher. His best work was the publication of the Nursery, said to have been New England's first child's magazine. After 15 years the larger publishing houses forced him from the business and he followed industrial pursuits for several years, until his retirement from active life about 20 years ago.

One day, while seated in his office in Boston, a sister of Lillian Nordica asked him if he could find a place for the unemployed sister. Mr. Shorey had advertised for a girl and promptly engaged "Lillie." Some time later his attention was attracted by her melodious voice, for she sang a great deal while at work, and it was at his suggestion and said to have been through his generosity that the girl entered the conservatory of music.

A little difficulty occurred between the girl and Mr. Shorey and for a time it appeared as if her musical education would be halted, but matters were finally adjusted and the girl's voice developed until she became one of the finest grand opera soloists in the world.

Mme. Nordica never forgot her benefactor, and she frequently visited Mr. Shorey at his home on Broadway.

In 1863 and 1864 Mr. Shorey served the city as an alderman. He was a Republican and in religious views a Universalist, and he served the First Universalist church as superintendent of its Sunday school for a great many years. He married in 1844, Sarah B. Newhall and she with one son, George L. Shorey, survive.

He Took $600.

Fevers Traced to Polluted Waters

—The committee on the "pollution of streams," appointed last year, of which Alec H. Seymour, secretary of the New York State Department of Health is chairman, presented its report last week to the meeting of the state and provincial boards of health of North America. The other member of the committee are Dr. Charles O. Probst, secretary of the Ohio State Board of Health, and Dr. H. D. Holton, secretary of the Vermont State Board of Health. Studies of conditions all over the United States and reports of State health departments show that there have been many epidemics of typhoid fever directly due to pollution of streams; that in many cases public nuisances have been caused and that many of the waters of the various states are rendered unfit for domestic and manufacturing purposes. Fish life has been destroyed and the waters ruined for boating, bathing fishing and rendered objectionable and obnoxious in other ways. The report shows that during the past few years laws have been passed dealing with this subject, but that the legislative activity has not kept pace with the needs.

Taking up the work that has been done in the various states and the conditions existing, and reviewing them, the committee shows that the question is one of widespread importance with which the various important boards of health of the country have been deeply concerned. Massachusetts has studied the subject carefully. The work of their state board of health is most excellent. The Rhode Island State Board of Health has been working with the United States Geological Survey in the examination of the pollution of a number of their streams, and they are making a good advance. In New Hampshire there is not a single sewage disposal plant in operation. They prohibit the pollution of lakes and streams used as public water supplies. The recommendations of the report are that inasmuch as any discharge of organic matter into streams used as public water supplies is dangerous to the public health, it is recommended that such practices be approved. That as an excessive charge of organic matter into a stream creates a public nuisance, and restricts its normal use and enjoyment, it is recommended that partial purification be practised in such cases.

which were seated about 400 men, women and children, collapsed.

The terrified shrieks and cries of those inside the big tent caused a stampede among those seated and standing about the ring, and before the counsel of the wiser and cooler heads prevailed scores had been trampled upon and otherwise injured.

When the first uproar was quieted to some extent the 20 or more employees of the circus hustled about and quickly dismantled the remaining seats in the tent, aided by those of the men who remained calm.

A scene of great confusion greeted the rescuers when they attempted to lend aid and succor to those pinioned among the debris. Men, women and little children struggled vainly to extricate themselves from painful and dangerous positions.

It was through the presence of mind of William Hoffman of Plain street that little Bernice McKeil, 11 years old, who lives on South Main street, escaped with her life. Although suffering from injuries himself, Hoffman, who is a middle-aged man, reached the McKeil girl and relieved her from her perilous position beneath the boards of the grandstand.

Miss McKeil was the most seriously injured, and although the extent of her injuries could not be definitely learned, it is feared that she suffered a fracture of the leg.

When some kind of order was restored physicians were telephoned for and in a short while Drs. William H. Cochran, M. F. Burke and George Bancroft arrived at the scene and did what they could to alleviate the sufferings of the injured. Fortunately none was very seriously injured, most of the victims suffering from fright, and all were dispatched to their homes in carriages.

The police hurried to the circus and did efficient work in preserving order. No arrests were made, and when the injured had been taken away the show was resumed, but none of the seats or bleachers that had been razed during the first rush were erected, the spectators watching the performance standing up.

to enter the parkway at Jamaica, when the automobile owned by John M. Barry of 4 Warren avenue and operated by James Savage of 129 Warren avenue, came along and struck her, throwing her to the street. The mud guard at the right side of the auto was smashed.

The screams of the girl attracted the attention of persons near, among them Nelson Curtis, Jr., who ran from his house and with others carried the injured woman into his father's home. The auto was not stopped until it reached Burroughs street, some distance from the scene of the accident. Then the owner and the chauffeur came back to learn how badly the girl was injured, and after a time went on their way.

He was young and presently abandoned male attire, becoming a graceful young female, named "Jeanette Robinson." He was employed as a domestic by various families, and was working in a West Side residence when detectives discovered his secret. He was fined $85 and costs, and ordered to resume the conventional dress of his sex.

Anticipates Big Payment.

New York, N. Y.—The directors of the Knickerbocker trust company which was forced temporarily to suspend during the financial crisis of 1907, has voted to anticipate payment, on August 1, on 25 percent of their surplus certificates.

Victory for Railroad.

Charleston, W. Va.—Judge Burdett in the circuit court has granted the prayer of the Coal and Coke railroad and enjoined Atty. Gen. The Coal and Coke road runs through the north central part of the state from Charleston for a distance of 130 miles, and is known as the Davis & Elkins railroad.

information placed in the hands of the state department, the accepted groom-to-be has a wife and family in this country. The love-lorn girl in the case is a sister of Miss Frances A. Carwood, of a wealthy New York and Washington family. Much mystery surrounds the whole transaction.

Several months ago, according to the meagre information furnished the state department, the young woman became infatuated with the supposed nobleman and had determined to wed her noble Romeo despite the objections and protests of her family.

In despair the family finally appealed to the Rev. John B. Quinn, and he in turn brought the matter to the attention of the state department. Making an unusual concession, representations were at once made to the Italian government, also to Ambassadors White at Paris and Reid at London, with the result that, so far as Italy is concerned, the marriage will be prevented.

Miss Garwood has been informed authoritatively that the person who had been mentioned as the Italian count was not even an Italian citizen and never had been. Instead, she was told, he was an Austrian by birth and had resided in New York for 20 or 25 years. Further information concerning the man was that he was a physician and surgeon of wide reputation in New York and the head of a hospital; that he was married and had a wife and son, who are said to be living in New York. It is pointed out at the state department that the government had acted in no capacity other than to transmit the messages to the ambassadors at London and Paris.

Turner Grange, members and Owners. Turner grange was organized in 1874, and has reached nearly 450. This is the fine farming noted for its excellent farmers and Turner sells over $380,000 worth of products annually, and it is the second largest creamery in New England.

The membership of Turner grange is composed solely of the families of this thrifty farming section, and the average attendance is over 160 annually. This large attendance enables the grange to hold interesting meetings at all times of the year. One peculiarity is the fact that no evening meetings are held, all being held in the daytime.

At 10 o'clock on the first and third Saturdays of every month the members assemble and the business commences. At the noon recess a dinner is served. At the close of the afternoon meeting the labors of the day are completed, and all get home in time for the evening chores.

This grange owns the hall in which the meetings are held, which is a commodious structure, containing the lodge room, dining room and kitchen completely equipped for serving large numbers and a library with over 700 carefully selected volumes. The latter is installed in a very attractive library room, nicely carpeted and containing reading facilities. A librarian is in charge during each meeting, and books are taken and returned by members. Over $100 is annually expended in purchasing new books.

A State Master on Good Roads.

State Master Creasy of Pennsylvania at a meeting at Selinsgrove, Snyder county, said that the "good roads" built by the highway department were "miserable and expensive failures. During the years of its existence no definite plan has been established except a religiously carried out method of squandering money. There is too much mahogany desk business about building the so called state roads. Every time a strip of such highway is to be made or repaired an office-attache from Harrisburg is sent to the scene. Generally he looks wise, and that is all. Although not cognizant of locality peculiarities of the roadbed, he disregards the suggestion of the ruralites. The unsatisfactory upkeep of many of these thoroughfares is a striking evidence of the employees' own ignorance."

An apprentice sailor boy fell from the round top of a vessel on the deck and was stunned, but little hurt. "Where did you come from?" exclaimed the captain in surprise. "From the north of Ireland, your honor!" was the prompt reply.—London Telegraph.

Written by request:

Wife, we've been long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear;
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear.
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Say not "good night," but in some brighter clime
Bid me "good morning."
We watched her breathing through the night,
Her breathing soft and low;
As in her breast the wave of life
Kept heaving to and fro.
Our very hopes belied our fears,
Our fears our hopes belied;
We thought her dying when she slept,
And sleeping when she died.
Her suffering ended with the day,
Yet lived she at its close,
And breathed the long, long night away
In statue-like repose.
But when the sun, in all his state,
Illumed the eastern skies,
She passed through glory's morning gate,
And walked in paradise.

Board of Trade, which made the announcement through the Boston Merchants' Association, is, conjointly with the latter organization, bending every energy to have the present temporary arrangement made permanent.

These associations will go further with the fight and attempt to secure such readjustment of the rates as may be necessary to give domestic manufacturers an equal chance with the foreign as it is felt that a long continuance of very low rates on imports must inevitably inflict a grave injustice on the industries of this country.

Eclipse Seen By Thousands.

The eclipse of the moon last week was a remarkable spectacle and it enjoyed by thousands of Bostoners. The moon was in plain view the time it rose until the end of eclipse, and the pleasant evening attracted men and women by hundreds to roofs and open places where it could be seen.

Perhaps the most peculiar feature of the eclipse was the fact that the moon was in a condition approaching total eclipse when it rose. It appeared above the horizon at 7.39, and then it was more than half within the shadow. Twenty minutes later the orb was completely covered.

Bathers To Get More Room.

The complaint which was made last summer that there was not enough room at the L street baths to accommodate the large crowds on a hot day will be remedied this season if Chairman of the Bath Commission Joseph A. Maccabe can carry out his plans.

Chairman Maccabe's idea is to make over all the present closets into lockers. By this method a great deal more room will be provided for large crowds. Each of the present closets will be made over into three lockers, and as there are about 300 closets it is believed accommodations for nearly 1000 will be furnished.

Lost Art of Enjoying Ourselves.

A happy party of nearly 30 German-Americans of all ages, took possession of a Cambridge car the other night on their way home from an outing to Revere Beach. The size of the party caused some surprise to the other passengers, and one of them found in the occurrence the opportunity for a sermon. "You never see American people flocking together like that," he remarked to me. "As a nation we have lost the art of enjoying ourselves."

Basket Hats Get Tangled.

Two women afforded some little amusement to the pedestrians in front of the Tech buildings last week. Both wore "peach baskets" and the plumage and hatpins of the two hats became entangled with each other. It took some time and no little effort on their committee on cities last week of the immediate necessity of the installation of the new high pressure fire service. The hearing was upon the petition of Mayor Hibbard for the right to borrow $1,000,000 for that purpose Jackson said that the ultimate cost would be $2,000,000.

Marked Increase in Commerce.

Custom house statistics show a marked increase in the commerce of the port last week in comparison to the corresponding week last year. The valuation of imports last week was $2,045,215, compared with $1,235,623 for the same period last year. Exports were valued at $1,565,910 against $718,163 for the same week in 1908.

Notes.

It is very easy to understand why "A Broken Idol" which made its Boston bow at the Tremont theatre last Monday, had such a phenomenal run in Chicago, for it is a typical musical extravaganza that must be seen to be appreciated. Like a bottle of champagne, it is sparkling, frothy, gay and amusing, and no matter how hot the weather, it is sure to make one good-natured.

This week is unquestionably the biggest of the year at Keith's theatre, for it marks the first appearance here in a number of years of Vesta Tilley, the undisputed queen of the London music halls and the highest priced vaudeville artist ever brought to this country. Other features of the bill this week are McKay and Cantwell formerly with "The Merry Go Round," Harry Tate and Company in "Motor-ing," and Frank Stafford and Company in a beautiful birdland sketch.

No more important vaudeville engagement has ever been announced for Boston than that of James K. Hackett, America's most popular actor, who, with his former star, E. M. Holland, is appearing at the Orpheum theatre this week, presenting "The Bishop's Candlesticks," a playlet founded on Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables." The balance of the bill is up to the high Orpheum standard. It includes, that phenomenal double-voiced singer, Toye, and Collins and Hart, who were features of "Little Nemo" company, in their laughable travesty, "Watch the 'Cat.'" This is undoubtedly the funniest of vaudeville teams and a sure laugh winner.

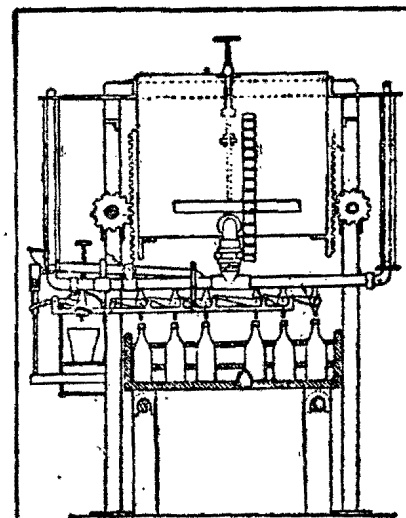

Wonderland is open for the season, no bigger than during the past three years, for its projectors built on a most generous plan at its inception, but better than ever, and surely destined to be more popular than ever, with genuine bargains in the entertainment line, every afternoon and evening. The new plan for bargain coupons with every purchased admission ticket, and the new combination strip ticket, are popular innovations.

he could not see children a good and perhaps taught them the elements of art—how to scratch pictures on stone.

Up to the present time sent among human relics belong those found in Neanderthal, many, in 1856, and in Spy, Belgium, thirty years later. When the Neanderthal skull was found Darwin was in its infancy, and men were rather ashamed to acknowledge their ancestors. To-day they are eager to trace back the relationship as far as possible. The Neanderthal skull has a capacity of some 1300 cubic centimetres, and this is about the capacity of the Chapelle-aux-Saints specimen. Modern man averages 1500, with Cuvier's and Lord Byron's expanding to 1800, while the Australian aborigine drops down to 1400. The best brain cavity that the manlike apes can show is 600 cubic centimetres.

The Chapelle-aux-Saints headpiece was found in one of the numerous limestone caves of the Correze district, amid flint stones and the bones of deer and bison. The geological level was about the same as that in which the Neanderthal and Spy bones were discovered. Together with the skull, some vertebral and hip bones were unearthed, which led M. Marcellin Boule, director of paleontology in the Paris Museum, to determine the sex of the earliest known human being. Small hip bones showed that the creature was a man, and the sutures of the skull that he was ripe with years when he died. He was about five and one-fourth feet high. The walls of the skull are very thick, the skull box is flattened and slopes to the front and the eye arches are exceedingly large and prominent. A wide mouth, a big nose and a massive jaw were characteristics in life. This type of man stands between a Java man and a modern man. The bottles are automatically cut off, the filled ones being moved along and a row of empty ones taking their places. This feature is controlled by the weight of the material, so that the bottles are always filled to the same point. The number of nozzles is also under the control so that many or few may be filled as desired.

islate to provide for the purpose of permitting either the New York State Agricultural College at Cornell or the New York State Experimental Station at Geneva to experiment in an effort to devise an economical process of drying peat. It was because of the present methods of peat drying for the purpose of fuel production are unsatisfactory that the possibilities for the peat industry, if the lands were reclaimed, were not gone into as deeply as the agricultural phase. It was figured that if reclaimed now the lands could be used for agricultural purposes until economical means of drying peat by other means than the sun and air method could be devised.

It was estimated that while the State's appropriations for this great project would be comparatively trifling, the value to it would be greater than its barge canal.

His Suspicious Occupation.

A man whose work ends at 7 a. m. was inspired by the spring atmosphere to take a stroll before going home to sleep. Near his house is a section (in Brooklyn) where the houses are surrounded by private gardens and the owners give their address as on the terrace. It was in this section of beauty and exclusiveness that this man chose to take his stroll, taking to himself an odor of refinement and intellectuality by inhalation.

He was strolling with a delicious, suspicious leisure when halted by a policeman with a query as to what he was doing there.

"Exercising my prerogative," replied the pedestrian, who really didn't see that it was any one's business.

"Ye're what?"

"Exercising my prerogative."

"Well, we'll see about that," said the cop. "You can come and tell the lieutenant all about it."

Willingly the man went. The station was just far enough away to make his walk so much more beneficial. Arrived there, both he and the policeman told their stories.

"Exercising your prerogative?" asked the lieutenant with a smiling nod at the policeman. "Well, Mr. Man, that is all right when you address a lieutenant, but you deserve to be run in when you tell it to a cop. He ain't no walking dictionary. Now go home; and another time kindly explain to a cop in language he will understand. Or carry a dictionary with you. Good morning."—New York Times.

Novelty in Correspondence.

A novelty in correspondence, recently inaugurated by the French Postoffice Department, has met with such success that it might be tried all over the world. This is the telegraphic letter. The hours between 9 p. m. and 4 a. m., are not busy ones for the French telegraphic lines, so the postal authorities decided to turn these hours to some use. Therefore, if one misses the post for a provincial town in France today one can at the rate of 100 words for 20 cents have the letter telegraphed and delivered by the first post next morning. The scheme is very simple and is working admirably in Paris.—New York Times.

MAKING SUNSHINE

It Is Often Found in Pure Food.

The improper selection of food drives many a healthy person into the depths of despairing illness. Indeed, most sickness comes from wrong food, and just so surely as that is the case, right food will make the sun shine once more.

An old veteran of Newburyport, Mass., says: "In October, I was taken sick and went to bed, losing 47 pounds in about 60 days. I had doctor after doctor, food hurt me and I had to live almost entirely on magnesia and soda. All solid food distressed me so that water would run out of my mouth in little streams.

"I had terrible night sweats and my doctor finally said I had consumption and must die. My good wife gave up all hope. We were at Old Orchard, Me., at that time, and my wife saw Grape-Nuts in a grocery there. She bought some and persuaded me to try it.

"I had no faith in it, but took it to please her. To my surprise it did not distress me, as all other food had done, and before I had taken the fifth package I was well on the mend. The pains left my head, my mind became clearer and I gained weight rapidly.

"I went back to my work again and now after six weeks' use of the food I am better and stronger than ever before in my life. Grape-Nuts surely saved my life and made me a strong, hearty man, 15 pounds heavier than before I was taken sick.

"Both my good wife and I are willing to make affidavit to the truth of this."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Tom looked dejectedly out of the window. His world seemed upside down. He was vaguely conscious of some one occupying the seat beside him, and then the voice of his dreams spoke.

"You haven't forgotten old friends so soon?"

He turned and looked into Bessie's blue eyes.

"I just learned from a letter that you were here. Why did you come?"

"I had a longing for city life, same as you had, so I got a position here."

His face darkened.

"You don't seem to be pleased," she said, flushing.

"No, Bessie, I am not. I don't like to think of you as anywhere but back there in the green fields. I wish we were both there this minute."

She looked incredulous.

"You'd give up your active, stirring life here? I thought you were entirely weaned away from green fields."

He stared at her wonderingly.

"Will you tell me when you came, where your position is, where you live and why you did not let me know you were here?"

"I came here three days ago. I do typewriting in the law office of Boardman & Livingston. I board at 227 Morton avenue."

"That is in the same block where my boarding house is—but my last question, Bessie!"

"I didn't suppose you would care to know."

"Bessie!"

Just then a woman, weary and old, came into the car, and Tom instantly gave her his seat and hung on to a strap until one of the two men seated in front of Bessie left the car. He slipped into this seat, looking keenly at his companion.

"Isn't your name Weldon—George Weldon?"

"Yes," said the man, extending his hand. "I was almost sure it was you, Blake, and I was wondering why you seem to be living here, and how far off your thoughts were."

"They were only back to the farm."

"I don't wonder. You are a born farmer. Will you tell me why you left that fine 600-acre farm your father bequeathed you? I should think you'd ask nothing better."

"I don't. I'm here to fit myself to run it; that is, scientifically. I came here a couple of months ago to attend the agricultural college and take a six months' course."

"Good idea! Live at the college?"

"No; they were crowded when I came, so I board out here in the suburbs."

"Enjoying city life out of school hours?"

"No; I study evenings. I want to crowd as much in these six months as I can. I know no one here, and I don't care to make any acquaintances

Indians as Tenants.

In Harper's Weekly Sam Davis tells of his experience with Indian tenants. He allowed Jim to squat on his land in return for the grubbing of an acre of sagebrush. "In a few weeks all the tramp Indians of the district were located there—but no land was grubbed. As a judge of the community, the author attained to some dignity, until he was voted 'bad medicine,' and he decided to abdicate when a committee of Union and Progress made a demonstration with grub hoes. Now the Indians possess his land, bask in the sun, play poker and cultivate the sagebrush assiduously.

BRITISH ARMY A SHAM, SAYS ROBERTS.

London.—"Our army is a sham! We have no army!" exclaimed Field Marshal Lord Roberts earnestly in a debate in the House of Lords upon the Duke of Bedford's motion for an inquiry into the condition of the reserve. Earl Roberts, who is known to favor compulsory military training, declared that he was amazed at the manner in which both houses treated the army as a party question and at the apathy of the nation regarding military defense. The nation, he said, did not believe in the danger of invasion, and no wonder, for their leaders told them there was no fear of it. He added:

"I know perfectly well that the leaders in both houses are anxious about the future, but they do not tell the country that we have neither an army to send abroad nor to defend the country at home. While we are sitting here, taking it easily and comfortably, the danger is coming nearer and nearer to us daily, and unless you cease telling the people they are living in safety and get an army fit to deal with any enemy we shall one day come to such utter grief that you will bitterly regret your inaction.

"It is a perfect marvel to me how anybody can see what is going on around us in Europe and be content with the condition of our army. No country in the world would attempt to defend itself with the paucity of men and with the untrained men we have got. You will never have a real army until you have taken the nation into your confidence and tell them their danger. You may think you are safe, but you are not. Be frank and, tell the nation what is before them. They will respond."

His admonitions were addressed to the Government representatives.

GLUCOSE TRUST MAY RUN CANDY STORES

National Confectioners See a Big Fight Coming For Control of the Trade—Arranging For Factories—And Afterward, President Bedford Says, May Sell Their Product Through Its Own Establishments.

New York City.—The Corn Products Refining Company, of which E. T. Bedford, of the Standard Oil Company, is president, and in which James A. Moffett, F. Q. Barstowe and Charles M. Pratt are directors, and William Rockefeller and the late H. H. Rogers were generally understood to be largely interested, is likely to go into the retail candy business.

As has been generally known, the directors at their last meeting took the preliminary steps toward starting a project for utilizing the glucose manufactured in the company's plants by establishing candy factories. This step, it was said recently, is likely to be followed by the retailing of the product of the factories, through a company yet to be organized, in its own stores. The candy business has recently seen in a smaller way signs of approaching organization on the modern lines of combination, but this step will be far in advance of anything yet suggested.

One of the principal ingredients in the making of candy in these days is glucose, of which the company manufactures between seventy-five and eighty-five per cent. of all that is consumed in the United States.

If the Corn Products Refining Company uses its glucose in its own candy factories and sells the product in its own stores, then the smaller and hitherto independent candy companies, such as Huyler's, Loft's, the Mirror and Repetti's, will either have to go into the bigger concern or compete with it, if they can.

Members of the National Confectioners' Association, who discussed the situation—and there were many who spoke freely on the subject—pointed out that the candy trade in the United States looked as though it were going to take a similar course to that already taken by this country's tobacco trade.

Original Honest Man Lives the Great State of Iowa.

Des Moines, Iowa.—William Wilson, a laboring man of this city, found $120 in greenbacks under a tin can several weeks ago.

Did William Wilson spend that $120? No, he did not. He turned it over to Justice of the Peace Roe, made an affidavit as to how he found the money, and that's why he is called Iowa's Original Honest Man.

The life-savers say that they never before witnessed such great changes in the coast line of Cape Cod, and where they formerly patrolled the beach the tides now run riot.

BABY'S SKIN ROUGH AS BARK.

Baby Boy Had Intense Itching Humor—Scratched Till Blood Ran—Found a Cure in Cuticura.

"Our son, two years old, was afflicted with a rash. After he suffered with the trouble several weeks I took him to the doctor, but it got worse. The rash ran together and made large blisters. The little fellow didn't want to do anything but scratch and we had to wrap his hands up to keep him from tearing the flesh open till the blood would run. The itching was intense. The skin on his back became hard and rough like the bark on a tree. He suffered intensely for about three months. But I found a remedy in Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. The result was almost magical. That was more than two years ago and there has not been the slightest symptom of it since he was cured. J. W. Lauck, Yukon, Okla., Aug. 28 and Sept. 17, 1908." Mrs. Eudora, wife of George O. Hodgdon, died at her home early Monday morning, aged 58 years, 2 months and 5 days. Mrs. Hodgdon had been in poor health for a number of years, but her last illness was of but five days, and the cause of death was chronic gastritis, complicated with other troubles. Her death is a great loss to her family, to the church and to the community in which she had lived so long. Mrs. Hodgdon formerly lived in Rochester, N. H., and in Jan. 1, 1873, she was married to George O. Hodgdon of Newmarket, where she has resided ever since. Besides her husband she leaves two daughters, Josephine, wife of Charles Sinclair, of Long Island City, N. Y., Elizabeth G., wife of Arthur Vennard, of Portsmouth, N. H. war he took part in the first great mistake was in making McClellan after that officer, admittedly a fine engineer and organizer, but a poor fighter, had shown his incapacity or unwillingness to accomplish results. Not until Lincoln saw that McClellan was bidding for the presidency did he finally make up his mind to effect a change. Neglect, delay, complaints and almost insults he had borne with exemplary patience. Only when it was plain that the general of his chief army was more intent on advancing his political fortunes than he was on ending the war did the president act. Later all his moves in connection with the Army of the Potomac showed that he was hunting for a general. Matters began to mend, but Lincoln had not yet found the man. Two commanders were tried only to be discarded. Meade—or was it fate?—won the battle of Gettysburg, but the president was bitterly disappointed that the victory was not vigorously followed up and Lee's army destroyed before it could escape into Virginia. He felt that one bold stroke here would have practically ended the war, and in this most military authorities agree with him.

Then Mr. Lincoln found his captain. Placing Grant at the head of all the armies, he left him practically unhampered to complete the war. He exhibited his own generalship not only in his choice of the man, but in turning over to him all details.

Mr. Lincoln displayed his generalship in many ways. He exhibited it before the war in his manner of conducting his political battles. While opposed to slavery, he was too wise to demand all he had in view. His fight was to stop the spread of slavery into the territories. He thus attacked the foe at his weakest point. When the victory was gained on this minor detail it was gained all along the line.

Again Mr. Lincoln showed his generalship in his insistence that the war was to save the Union and not to save or destroy slavery. By this means he kept the border states in the Union and gained the support of the war Democrats.

His firmness in regard to Fort Sumter was a third evidence of his tactical ability. Any weakening at that point would have been fatal. Lincoln here showed himself superior to Seward and all the other vacillating temporizers. His unwavering attitude at this critical time heartened the nation.

His modifications of Seward's unwise instructions to our minister to England, his treatment of the Mason and Sidel affair, his tolerant and humorous attitude toward Vallandigham and other northern opponents of the war, and, greatest of all, his issuance of the emancipation proclamation as a war measure, all these and other like things showed that Abraham Lincoln was a political and military general of the first rank.

He filled his incubator, but did not know it was loaded with infertile and stale eggs, as he was unaware that most farmers do not mate guineas in pairs to insure fertility, and their roving bands of birds generally all lay in one nest until some night when Jerry goes for the cows he finds half a bushel of brown eggs hidden under the ferns and elders.

Like a woman's age, theirs is hard to guess. When he tested those 225 eggs that were to furnish pheasants at fabulous prices to tickle the palates of Wall street epicures he merrily declared there was not a clear infertile egg among them; but, alas, he knew not that the thick brown shell of a guinea egg renders it opaque to light, so that it seems fertile when it is not and appears fresh though a rot and spot.

Guineas are popular. There's money in them, but there's no short cut to the gold mine. You must travel the old road of experience to get there. Very few have had success hatching and brooding them artificially.

Like the turkey and pheasant, that have a wild ancestry, the guineas are semiwild, and their inherited instincts and habits must be reckoned with.

Even those who are nature taking with old clucks meet with difficulties just as they do in making hens play stepmother to turkey poults.

They find that little guineas cannot stand the dampness and confinement of coops. Their timidity is a detriment to development, and they do not have the exercise, greens and insects and open, free, fresh, sanitary life, as in nature.

If hatching and rearing guineas with hens you must follow nature so far as possible.

Get eggs from birds where sexes are equal in number. Set your hens in May and June on the ground and put an inch mesh wire run around nest, as chicks run and fly as soon as hatched.

After they get to feeding well turn them loose on brushy ground.

In three weeks they pass the danger period and at six weeks can shift for themselves.

Feed them like turkeys—a little at a time, but often.

Mix a hard boiled egg with equal quantity of stale breadcrumbs, sprinkle with grit and feed this amount to every eight chicks after twenty-four hours have passed. Feed this three or four times a day, according to their appetites.

Feed thus for two days.

On third day give bread dipped in milk and squeezed dry for breakfast, chop onion tops, egg, curd and grit together for dinner and dry cornmeal, oatmeal and wheat bran, equal parts, for supper. Gradually taper off to a ration of cracked wheat, millet, canary seed, cracked corn and hemp.

But, say, the easiest way to make guineas pay is to let the old pair run the whole affair. Then you get lots of guineas with small cost and care.

25 cents per pair. The original color of its purplish green with white pearls, white ears and a bony helmet and orange. The White, or Albino, a sport from the Pearl, is rapidly advancing in favor.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

When invited to visit another man's plant, do not stand off and criticize his chickens. Remember they may be good, better, best, and you may praise them so far as they go. If yours are finer, he will notice it himself when he returns the call.

When Minorcas lay eggs that weigh thirty-four ounces to the dozen you can easily see what breed you want if you are catering to a very select, high priced white egg trade.

Castlebar, County Mayo, Ireland, is said to be rearing chickens that are entirely green. Several of these, we are informed, have been shipped to this country. America produced the Barred Rocks, and Erin now returns by producing the Sham Rock.

Poultry products worth $425,000 were shipped from Oregon to Alaska during the past year. That's certainly great, but just wait. Later it will be greater. Oregon has only started in the race.

Over 100 men were arrested and seventy-five live and dead birds were captured at a cock main in Buffalo recently. They surely will remember that main.

A neighbor across the street, a second within one square, had chickens stolen lately. Why were our beautiful birds passed by? Ted, our big bulldog, can tell you why.

It is remarkable how active Leghorn chicks are when only a few weeks old and what mischief they get into. Don't set an open water bucket around or they will get into that.

One of the fancy points demanded for prize winning turkeys is white edging on tail coverts, fluff and main tail feathers.

Don't follow this fad in breeding. It is generally a sign of weakness.

The largest, strongest birds nearly always have the brownish white edging.

A chicken thief is being tried for the fourth time at Sunbury, Pa., for stealing chickens. This will be his fourth sentence, as the evidence is conclusive. As soon as he gets out of jail he at once starts for a roost, and the cops just follow and give him a boost.

It is a heartless act to shut up hens all summer and give them no greens to eat. If you expect to keep them healthy and get eggs under such conditions you are very green.

Observant, but Not Penitent. Burton had been very naughty several times, when spanking had been of no avail, and I decided a scolding might produce the desired results. So I drew him down beside me and began to reason gently with him. With his great brown eyes fixed on my face he appeared to be listening intently. Much pleased with the result of my plan, I was congratulating myself when he suddenly interrupted me. "MEMOIRS OF DAN RICE," THE CLOWN OF OUR DADDIES.

At Last, There is on Sale a Book
Brimful of American Humor.

Any bookseller will tell you that the constant quest of his customers is for "a book which will make me laugh." The bookman is compelled to reply that the race of American humorists has run out and comic literature is scarcer than funny plays. A wide sale is therefore predicted for the "Memoirs of Dan Rice," the Clown of Our Daddies, written by Maria Ward Brown, a book guaranteed to make you roar with laughter. The author presents to the public a volume of the great jester's most pungent jokes, comic harangues, caustic hits upon men and manners, lectures, anecdotes, sketches of adventure, original songs and poetical effusions; wise and witty, serious, satirical, and sentimental sayings of the sawdust arena of other days. These "Memoirs" also contain a series of adventures and incidents alternating from grave to gay; descriptive scenes and thrilling events; the record of half a century of a remarkable life, in the course of which the subject was brought into contact with most of the national celebrities of the day. The book abounds in anecdotes, humorous and otherwise; and it affords a clearer view of the inside mysteries of show life than any account heretofore published. Old Dan Rice, as the proprietor of the famous "One Horse Show," was more of a national character than Artemus Ward, and this volume contains the humor which made the nation laugh even while the great Civil War raged. This fascinating book of 500 pages, beautifully illustrated, will be sent postpaid to you for $1.50. Address Book Publishing House, 134 Leonard street, New York City.

A NAME IN THE SAND.

Alone I walked the ocean strand;
A pearly shell was in my hand,
I stooped and wrote upon the sand
My name—the year—the day.
As onward from the spot I passed,
One lingering look behind I cast,
A wave came rolling high and fast
And washed my little lines away.

And so, methought, 'twill shortly be
With every mark on earth from me;
A wave of dark oblivion's sea
Will sweep across the place
Where I have trod the sandy shore
Of time and been, to be no more,
Of me—my day—the name I bore,
To leave no track nor trace.

And yet, with Him who counts the sands
And holds the waters in His hands,
I know a lasting record stands
Inscribed against my name,
Of all this mortal part has wrought,
Of all this unthinking soul has thought
And from these fleeting moments caught
For glory or for shame.

Far Away Fields.

The cold November downpour drove even Tom Blake to an overcrowded street car. There remained one unoccupied strap to which he attached himself. He looked grimly over the rain swept vistas of the avenue, and his heart was filled with a longing for the green fields and the meadow lands of his home.

"What a miserable grind city life is!" he thought. "How any one can choose it is beyond me, and how much worse for a woman—a working woman—even than for a man."

He looked at the drabbed skirt of a young girl in the seat opposite, at her over-fashionable hair and her cheap little imitation of prevailing styles. By force of contrast came to his memory the vision of a slender slip of a girl in a dress of peach-pink, standing knee deep in a field of daisies. With a shudder he tried to realize her environed by ribbon counter, or office desk. Then he fell to wondering, as he had so many times of late, what had come between him and this same slip of a girl since he had left the farm. She had been away on a visit when he came to the city, and had not replied to the long letter he had left for her. To the letter he had written from her had come in reply only a formal little note, and then, unbroken silence.

"There's a seat!" growled the conductor, brushing past him, and Tom noted that during his reverie there had been many exits. When he was seated he recalled the still unopened letter in his pocket, and he proceeded to open it. It was from his cousin and housekeeper, Julia. At the close for so short a time. I tell you, Weldon, the green fields will look pretty good to me next spring."

Weldon looked as if he had heard enough of his old-time acquaintance's affairs, but Tom instantly continued:

"I had always wanted to take this course, and one day, when September harvesting was well under way, I just packed my grip and came on a moment's notice."

"Morton avenue!" bawled the conductor.

Tom helped Bessie off the car, and they went down the avenue under the same umbrella.

"Tom," she said, shyly, "I heard all you said to that man."

"I raised my voice so you should. It was to you I was talking. I think I bored Weldon."

"When I came home from Aunt Laura's I heard you had come here. I went to your house, and your cousin Julia told me you had gone because you were tired of farm life."

"But she surely gave you the long letter I left for you!"

"No; not even a message. Then came your note from the college, and well, I didn't write again, because every time I saw Julia she said she had heard from you and that you were having such a gay time, that you lived in a big boarding house and were going to theatres and dancing schools!"

Tom's laugh rang out lustily.

"I am at a big boarding house, but as yet only know one man to speak to. Haven't been to a theatre—we will go to one to-night—and as for dancing school—well, the nearest I have come to it is the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium."

Her laugh was mirthful, but a little apologetic.

"I ought to have seen the method in Julia's madness."

"Tell me why you came here, Bessie?"

"I was so lonesome, I couldn't stay there. My uncle got me this position."

"And you like it so much you never want to go back!" he said with a sigh. "And you are making so much money!"

She looked at him ruefully.

"Oh, Tom, after I pay my board, washing and car fare I will have twenty-five cents a week. I work until 6 at night and go to bed at 9, and I don't know a soul to speak to. It's very gay!"

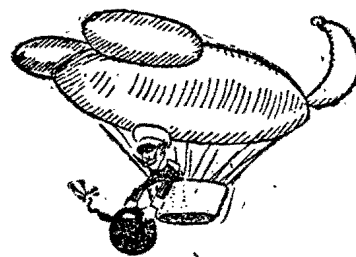

The little break in her voice was sweet music to Tom.

"To-morrow will be Saturday, Bessie. Will you resign and let me take you home to-morrow night? I'd like to make Julia deliver that letter. There is much in it to answer."

"Tom, I did resign. I couldn't stand it any longer. I'm glad to

ENGLAND HAUNTED BY GERMAN GHOSTS

President Butler's Remark That It is a Form of Present-Day Emotional Insanity Strikingly Borne Out by Series of Absurd Events.

London.—The speech at the Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration of President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, in which he described Great Britain's attitude to Germany as a form of "present-day emotional insanity," has been strikingly confirmed during the past week. Sensational stories of German airships, stacks of German Mausers stored in a London cellar, thousands of German waiters and hair dressers eagerly anticipating the Emperor's signal to deliver England to an invading army of their fellow countrymen, have been the main features of the news.

of the mysterious and swift-moving dirigible at the same moment in various places on the east and west coasts, and even in Ireland. Captains of incoming steamers have been credited with statements that they exchanged flare signals with the aerial visitor in the North Sea, and some newspapers went so far as to insinuate that the "scare-ship" had its home on a German warship now in the North Sea at maneuvers, to which it returns after its nightly flight. Descriptions of the secret fly-by-night became more and more graphic until certain

The First Dark Horse.

The Democratic national convention 1844 was the first to nominate for the presidency a candidate usually spoken of in the figurative language so characteristic of our politics as a "dark horse." It was also the convention to revive and permanently to establish the rule requiring a two-thirds majority for nominations, the first also to make the extension of slavery the chief campaign issue, and the first to be distinguished by those gusts of passion, that emotional turbulence, those sudden, uncontrollable impulses which have since so often characterized these vast gatherings.—Westchester County Magazine.

In the year 1694 William Patterson, founder of the Bank of Scotland, conceived the grand project of planting on the Isthmus of Darien a British colony which, in his own words, "should secure for Great Britain the keys of the universe," enabling their possessors to give laws to both oceans and to become the arbiters of the commercial world." This colony was actually founded at a place still known as Puerto Escoces, but its people were subsequently forced by the Spaniards to evacuate and return to Scotland.

Poultry for Profit

A CHEAP TURKEY SHED.

It Costs Only $3.85, But Mrs. Portis Would Not Take $100 For It.

I built my turkey shed and the pen for them myself. My shed is 4 feet high at back and 6 feet at front, 12 feet long and 6 feet wide. I only used six studdings, one at each corner and one in middle, which took three pieces of 2x4, one foot long, and one piece 2x4, eighteen feet long, made the three rafters. Four pieces 12x12 made the back and it took seven pieces 12x12 to cover and six pieces 12x12 to cover the ends.

I put the number on back and top straight so it could be easily taken off and used. I lapped the roof just enough to keep it from leaking, left no cracks for the wind to come through in back and ends. The high and south side I left open, except one piece at top to which I fastened a drop door of net wire. I began at each end of the house and ran five-foot wire fence with a twelve-inch base plank and made a little yard about twenty-four feet square. I made a gate and a little slide door for the little chicks to go in and out at.

I bought my lumber delivered at $1.25 a hundred and the whole thing cost me $3.85. I would not do without it for a hundred dollars.

I raise as many chickens in winter as I do in summer. I make small coops, air tight on three sides to keep out the cold and slatted on one side to let in the sun. I place these under the shed and when a hen hatches I put her in one of the coops and keep her there for several days. If it is bright and warm I let her out in the pen. When they are old enough I let out of pen each day, but put them in coops at night; when it is cold and rainy I keep the hen in coop all the time and the little chicks have the whole shed and pen to run under.

Later in the season I use the pen for setting my turkeys in. I fix nest, put turkey on, put plenty of water and feed, and there is always a dust bath ready for her under the dry shed, so I am never afraid of her going back to her old nest or a stray dog getting to her. After she hatches I just let her come off in the pen when she gets ready. When the little ones are stout enough I let the hen out every pretty day after the dew dries off, but make them roost under shed every night until they are large enough to fly up to the roost. — Mrs. J. H. Portis, in Southern Cultivator.

FEED FOR HOGS.

A swine grower says that he has tested feeding some corn silage to his hogs, along with corn meal, and finds that they thrive well, and by feeding them mixed with clover hay run through his cutting box the pigs grow more rapidly. He says the silage keeps them in good condition, being succulent, like grass, and fed with the dry foods keeps them healthy. — Farmers' Home Journal.

POULTRY AND FRUIT GROWING.

A combination of fruit growing and poultry raising is especially recommended in a bulletin from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Locate the poultry houses if possible so that the runs will be in the orchard. The fowls will destroy thousands of harmful insects, thus greatly benefiting the trees and increasing the prospects for fruit, and the fowls will at the same time gain great comfort and benefit by the protecting shade of the trees. Plum trees and cherry trees are especially benefited by the presence of fowls about their roots. Peach trees will grow most rapidly and soonest give an abundant shade. — Weekly Witness.

REARING HORSES.

When a horse gets into the rearing habit it is best to quit using him for riding, as it is hard to break him. The horse given to rearing is dangerous under the saddle, as the rider cannot tell when the horse will fall backward and pin him underneath. It is a mistake of the rider at such time to loosen the reins and cling to the horn or pommel of the saddle or grab the horse's mane, as this does not give protection. Expert riders say that the best thing to do when a horse starts to rear is to quickly and violently pull the head to one side. This will put him off his balance and so he cannot rear up, but the rider must be quick. — Epitomis.

HOG HOUSE STORM DOORS.

Here is a storm door for hog house, which consists of one plank sixteen or eighteen inches wide by fifty-four inches long, or it can be made of narrow boards with battens, one-half inch iron rod, twenty-four inches long with flattened ends and holes punched for bolts; two bolts, two staples, or in place of staples, two blocks one by three by six with gain to fit over rod which makes a simple yet durable hinge or hanging for door. The rod should be near centre of door, so as to equalize space of wind pressure on top and bottom of door, yet the lower end should be heavier than top, so as to have experience therein. Not

The Pulpit

A SERMON
BY THE REV.
J. W. HENDERSON

Theme: Regeneration.

John 3: "Ye must be born again." This is fundamental in the teaching of Jesus. It lies at the root of all Christian experience. It is as true as it is terse, as philosophic as it is pungent, as timely as it is insistent. No man can know the joy of the Christian life until he has been born anew.

This statement of Jesus to Nicodemus was startling. It was both a challenge and a rebuke, a bit of sage counsel and a quiet though terrible arraignment.

Nicodemus came in the name of the class whose representative historically he has been and immediately he was. In their own eyes they held the essence of wisdom unto life eternal. "We know that Thou art a teacher come from God." "We know." In their opinion it was necessary for all the world to become regenerated in the bonds of Judaism before the world could enjoy a saving knowledge of the only true God. They were God's people, His chosen, the sons of Abraham. They were quite familiar with the idea of a new birth, for they declared that the world would have to be born to a knowledge of their spiritual possessions before the world could possess the gift of the divine favor.

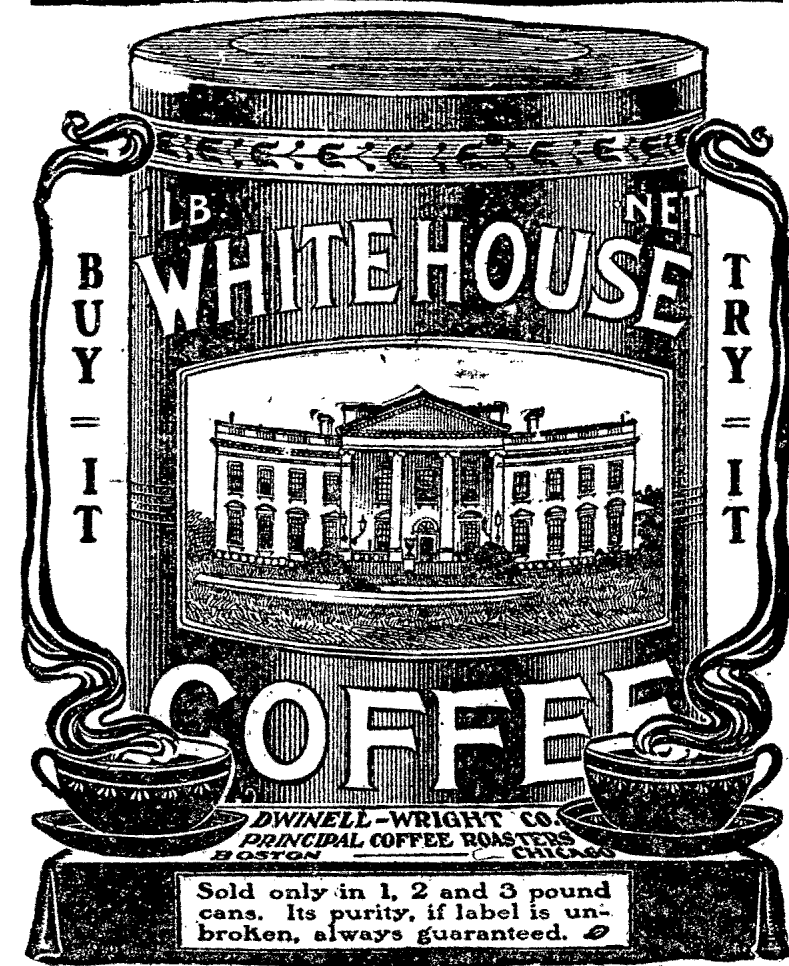

No doubt Nicodemus thought he could instruct Christ. In all likelihood he had little prescience of the reception he would receive. It is quite probable that he considered himself a fit challenger of Christ. Behold the challenged is the challenger, the representative of the wisdom of Israel a pupil of a despised Nazarene. It is not to be wondered that Nicodemus was amazed.

Jesus declared strong doctrine. "Ye must be born again." "Ye," the leaders and righteous of Israel! "Ye," teachers and priests and prelates, learned and intellectual, who have tithed mint and curmin and anise and forgotten the weightier matters of the law, "ye" must be born anew!

If He had said that the Greeks and Romans, barbarians and foreigners, Gentiles, without the pale, had to be born again, there would have been no "How can these things be?" But "ye!"

And yet it was quite correct teaching and most sublimated thought. As truly as it is necessary that a man must be born to enjoy the exercise of physical faculties in a physical world so truly is it requisite that in the world of the Spirit he shall undergo a process of spiritual reborn. It is necessary that a man shall enter the world before he can experience the varied activities of physical life. He must become alive to the intellectual environment of humanity before he can have experience therein. Not

CROWS ON GOLF LINKS.

One Fastidious Bird That Would Steal Only New Balls.

The crow seems to be attracted to golf balls in a way wholly peculiar from the rest of the bird species. In parks where the rook and the crow abound one can notice them sitting in the trees or hopping about the putting greens in the distance watching the roll of the ball with a direct or side-long glance expressive of the keenest interest and curiosity, which is soon translated into a desire to carry it off to the roost in the neighboring wood.

The Kew Gardens adjoin the Mid-Surrey course, and in the royal preserve there used to be a fairly large colony of crows nesting among the trees. Of this colony there was one particular crow who found his greatest amusement in mingling among the golfers and in disconcerting their play by indulging in repeated predatory campaigns against their golf balls.

His policy was to hover in attendance on those players who used new white balls only. Those on which paint had been chipped or which had

DURHAM POINT.

This community was greatly saddened by the death of Mrs. Priscilla (Edgerly) Page on Thursday, June 3, at her late home. She was born Dec. 23, 1856, on the place where she always lived, her absence from the home only being when she made a brief visit to some relatives or friends. She was a woman highly esteemed and respected. Her home life was where she found her interests and greatest pleasures. She had a warm welcome for all who came to her doors, and many will ever hold in memory her generous ways of entertaining her friends, and the children always found a tasteful treat in waiting for them whenever calling at her home. She was married to Ozro D. Page of Newmarket, May 23, 1874, who now survives her, as also one son, John R. Page, of Durham. Aside from these she has no near relatives, except three grandchildren, True, Ruth and Blanche Page. Her devotion to her husband and son, and especially the constant care and anxiety she had for her grandson, True, who has been so critically ill of late, should not be passed by unnoticed. During her last sickness, which was only a short time, she tried to cheer those about her and never forgot to think of their interests, her own suffering bearing patiently. Her funeral was held at her home Saturday afternoon, the service being conducted by Rev. J. C. Prince of Newmarket.

Characteristics Required to Make a Successful Officer.

[Synopsis of a paper read by C. S. Lockwood of North Hannibal (N. Y.) grange.]

The master of a grange should feel the responsibility of his position. While he should not think he is the whole grange, yet he will certainly be held responsible for decline in interest or in membership, and if so the rule of fair play should entitle him to credit if the grange is successful.

First.—Although the grange is a school, it cannot be governed by fixed rules. It has been my experience that it is not always best to call to order at a stated time, but to be governed by the number present, and at the same time do not delay the meeting too long so as to tire those present.

Second.—The master should be reasonably familiar with parliamentary rules.

Third.—He should be prompt and fair with his decisions and courteous to all.

Fourth.—Owing to the prominent part which he is of necessity compelled to take in all meetings he should be quick to think and act and also very brief so as to avoid the possibility of becoming tiresome.

Fifth.—In conferring the degrees the master should use all the means at his command to make the ceremony of interest to those who are already members, for in some instances members have been known to stay away, when the degrees are given. He should make himself perfectly familiar with the unwritten work that he may be able to impress it on the minds of the candidates in a clear and interesting manner.

Sixth.—I wish to make this particularly clear. The master should consider himself the host for the evening and make all feel at home and that he is pleased to see them present. This can be done by taking pains to speak to all either before grange or at some of the intermissions and especially to those who are new members or not regular in attendance.

Seventh.—The master should carry out as far as possible in his daily life the noble teachings of our Order as laid down in the ritual that the influence of the grange may be felt for the good of the community. By increasing the influence of the Order we will in-

On the evening of Memorial Day there was a ball at Grange hall, Northwood. Thirty-eight couples were in the grand march. Music was furnished by Harvey's orchestra of Manchester.

Last Sunday, at the North Nottingham church, a goodly number of our people enjoyed another excellent sermon by Mrs. Annie P. Bailey. Her subject was "The Rise and Fall of Kingdoms."

The ladies of the North Nottingham church held a social last Friday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abbott Jones. There was an exciting peanut hunt, and an interesting guessing contest. Miss Ernestine Leighton recited "How He Saved St. Michael's," and Mrs. Bailey read several humorous selections. Later in the evening Miss Annie Dame recited "The Old Man Goes to Town," and Seth E. Dame and Harold Colcord played on the violin and organ. Ice cream and cake were served. The proceeds amounted to $5.45. The next social will be held at True W. Woodman's on June 25.

Mrs. William Phalen of Gloucester, Mass., recently paid a short visit to her sister, Mrs. John P. Fogg. On this, her first visit to Nottingham, she was accompanied by her son, Prof. William C. Phalen, of the U. S. Geological Survey, and his family, of Washington, D. C. ECHO.

Women Who Are Envid.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation or kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such, Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at The A. H. Place Drug Company's.

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW

What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Newmarket Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.
Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause—that backache pains come from sick kidneys, 'twould save much needless woe.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys. Newmarket people endorse this:

Mrs. Hannah Brown, living on Exeter St., Newmarket, N. H., says: "I am pleased to say that I have been greatly benefited by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. I had a kidney weakness for some time. I also suffered from dull, nagging backaches, and pains across my loins, and mornings upon arising I would feel little like beginning my work. If I stooped or lifted anything I would suffer severely, and the kidneys bothered me by their too frequent action. For two years I tried several remedies in an effort to find relief, but without any good results. I then learned of Doan's Kidney Pills and procured a box from the A. H. Place Drug Co. I used them as directed, and in a few days the backaches vanished, the secretions became clear and my kidneys were restored to good condition. I am feeling so much stronger and better in every way that I gladly recommend the remedy that restored my health."
