NEWMARKET, N. H., FRIDAY, JANUARY 31, 1902.

EATING AT NIGHT.

If judiciously done, it will help to make you fat.

It was formerly thought that food taken at bedtime created indigestion and bad dreams. While undoubtedly rich and heavy food is inappropriate at the time chosen for repose, a light nourishing repast at night often contributes to sound sleep by drawing the blood away from the brain.

Physicians are now advising a bedtime meal for weak, nervous and emaciated people. Although the demand made upon the system is naturally much less than during the waking hours, there is a wasting away of tissues consequent upon the suspension of nutrition for many hours. Food taken at dinner is digested at bedtime. Often one is restless and wakeful at night because the stomach is empty.

So a well known physician: "Man is the only creature I know of who does not deem it proper to sleep on a good meal. The infant instinctively cries to be fed at night, showing that food is necessary during that time as well as through the day, and that too long without it causes it discomfort, which it makes known by crying."

If you cease it, eat an easy, easily digested meal at bedtime, and the long and heavy meal after dinner for you a problem in addition, instead of separation, of adipose tissue.

Not What He Meant at All.

Politeness, it is true, must have its origin in a kind heart and a desire to please, but tact and thoughtfulness and quick wit are also essential to good manners. A very shrewd hostess who was entertaining a large company one evening turned to a group of young men standing near her chair and smilingly said, "May I trouble you gentlemen for a glass of water from the pitcher on the table?"

Several of the young men hurried to comply with the request. One who was particularly active succeeded and as he handed the glass to the hostess she complimented him on his quickness.

"Oh, that's nothing," he said. "I...

Short Cuts to Fame.

Sudden Leaps to Clirneracy in the Literary Arena.

A Single Line Has Given Was a Star Fame For Its Author — Cases in Which Odidience Was Bestowed of the Latest Writings.

There are two roads by which in literature may be reached. One is the road of long, tedious work of years. That is a long, winding road, which winds over many hills and descends into deep valleys. Of such is the life of Walter Scott, who built his memorial in print and paper, and will last so long as the language he wrote in and many others endure.

The other kind of literary inspiration is the spicy concoction of a few marvelous sentences, which have been permitted to win a fame almost, if not quite as great as theirs. For instance, how many cross-eyed readers of modern poetry do not remember the name of W. Congreve. Who about 175 years ago was one of the most famous English dramatists? Probably not one poet living to-day knows what Congreve was, and yet he was one of the most famous English dramatists of his day.

"Maiden fair, shall I ever see thee again?"

"What is it?"

"A Newspaper."
The Boston Tammany's strike, which was thought to have been successfully halted by last week's meeting of the state convention of Tammany Hall, is expected to be revived by a movement of street troops of the bureau of the state convention of Tammanly Hall. This movement was headed by a laborer's force, and it is expected to have a strong influence on the work of the movement for the next few years. The strike is expected to continue for a long time, and it is feared that it will have a serious effect on the labor movements of the state.

which often crosses descend into many. Of such is the fame of him who built for himself a print and paper which so long as the language that wrote in and many others shall endure. The other kind is of the happy inspiration of a few marvelous moments, which have been permitted to win fame almost, if not quite, as enduring as theirs.

For instance, how many among the myriad readers of modern poetry and infant drama remember the name of William Congreve, who about 300 years ago was one of the most famous English dramatists? Probably not 1 per cent; yet Congreve wrote one immortal line that everybody knows:

Music hath charms to soothe a savage breast.

Congreve wrote many finer lines than this, but this is the one that has saved him from twentieth century oblivion. It was copied into newspapers and magazines, and the best literary critics of the age ascribed it not only to Southey, but even to Campbell and Byron himself. All disclaimed the authorship, and Byron described it as the most beautiful ode in the language. When people forget to speak English, they will forget the lines beginning:

Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note;

as his case to the ramparts we hurried.

Lady Anne Barnard, a friend of Sir Walter Scott, might have lived and died in obscurity, so far as the greater world outside her own social circle was concerned, if an inspiration had not suggested to her mind that of a
Chamber Changes His Mind
London, Jan. 26--The question of the management of the British Empire was raised in the house of commons yesterday. The matter was unexpectedly long on the subject in debate, and Mr. Chamberlain, who has been supporting the government in the negotiations with the French, is now opposed to it. The prime minister, Sir Edward Grey, has expressed his willingness to consider the question further. Mr. Chamberlain has asked for an adjournment of the debate until next week in order to consider the matter more thoroughly.

Sanitary Projects Approved.
Mexico City, Jan. 20--The Pan-Ameri­can Union yesterday approved the proposed sanitary measures. The project has been under consideration for several years, and is expected to be completed in the near future.

In France.
Paris, Jan. 20--The French government has decided to reduce the number of diplomatic representatives stationed in foreign countries. The move is part of a larger effort to cut costs and reduce the size of the French diplomatic corps.

In Washington.
Capitol Hill, Jan. 20--Representative John B. McCall, a Republican from Texas, introduced a bill to establish a national park in the vicinity of the National Mall. The proposal is expected to receive strong support from both parties.

In Europe.
London, Jan. 20--A British delegation, led by Sir Edward Grey, arrived in Vienna for talks with Austrian officials. The delegation is expected to discuss the possibility of a settlement in the years-old dispute between the two countries.

In the Far East.
Tokyo, Jan. 20--Japanese authorities have arrested several American citizens suspected of involvement in anti-government activities. The arrests are part of a broader crackdown on dissent in the country.

In the South.
New Orleans, Jan. 20--A group of African-American workers have announced plans to strike for better wages and working conditions. The strike is expected to have a significant impact on the local economy.

In the Southwest.
Austin, Jan. 20--The Texas legislature has approved a bill that would allow for the establishment of a new university in the state. The new institution is expected to be named after Texas Governor Sam Brown.

In the Midwest.
Chicago, Jan. 20--The Chicago Board of Education has approved a plan to expand the city's public school system. The plan is expected to cost several million dollars and will increase the number of students served by the district.

In the West.
San Francisco, Jan. 20--A group of protesters has occupied a building in San Francisco in an effort to draw attention to the issue of poverty and inequality in the city. The protesters are calling for the establishment of a universal basic income program.

"Mysterious of Thorne Inn and Shore"

Author: Florence Nightingale

CHAPTER 2

"The hospital was a place where they could freely fetch a way, they came down to Thorne at the very center of the hospital, where the sick went walking, and there was no one in her way."

"Miss Clara! Nell!" she said, in a low voice, as she came up to her. She raised her eyes to see her for a moment only, and she knew a great change had taken place in the girl. Her face had been such a beautiful face, and now he saw the change had been so great that he could not believe it if he was not sure."

"Miss Nightingale," Nell said, with a smile, as she came up to her. "I have been told that you are an excellent nurse, and I have come to ask you to come to the Thorne Inn and Shore.""

"Nell!" said Miss Nightingale, in a low voice. "I have been told that you are an excellent nurse, and I have come to ask you to come to the Thorne Inn and Shore.""

"I am afraid," said Miss Nightingale, "I have been told that you are an excellent nurse, and I have come to ask you to come to the Thorne Inn and Shore.""

"Yes," said Nell, in a low voice. "I have been told that you are an excellent nurse, and I have come to ask you to come to the Thorne Inn and Shore.""

"But your next question," said Nell, "I have been told that you are an excellent nurse, and I have come to ask you to come to the Thorne Inn and Shore.""
There was a sudden pause in the conversation, and the room fell silent. "Mr. Clifton was not the only one," Miss Halyard said. "I heard him say, 'But I didn't write the story of the whole story. We had too much trouble galloping in the rain, and I knew he'd understand.' He understood it all so clearly.

Now it is time to draw the curtains and close the doors. The world is waiting for the next chapter to begin.
Prince Henry of Prussia is coming to this country pretty soon? Well, as long as we have them, knowing the spirit in which we live, we might as well make them welcome. Mrs. O. M. died today — making very good preparations to receive her in the presence of the coroners. Mrs. O. M. has one of those deaths (she’s sold out) and we are going to be at her headload and then she’s going to be up and around and the papers can have the best of it. Mrs. O. Newmarket School Notes:

The long johns of Prinkham Cover school Teachers’ Association has at last seen fit to publicly. It has come to our attention that Mr. O. M. has a school that has been in operation for several years, and it is a very fine school. It is supported by the people of the town and is very much appreciated. The teachers are well paid and the children are well taught. It is a credit to the town and to the school district.

In the past 22 years of efficient and successful management of the cotton mill in Newmarket, the mill has been in constant operation. The mill has been operated by Mr. O. M. and his family. The mill has been a source of much-needed employment and income for the town. It has been a credit to the town and to the mill owners.

"I have made a last attempt to save Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and now say that we never said it would. It won't cure dyspepsia, we never claimed it. But we will cure it in all its forms of colds of any kind. We first said this sixty years ago; and we've been saying it ever since.

These cases: Dr. M. T. All colds.

Polly's Voice Revived by Operation.

"Polly, all right, all right! Your. . . ."

The doctor, who had been standing by, now stepped forward and looked into the patient's face. She was pale and looked as if she were about to faint.

"Polly, your voice is better."

"Yes, doctor." The patient's voice was clear and distinct now, and she could be heard from the other side of the room.

"You have had a cold, haven't you?"

"Yes, doctor." Polly was still pale, but she was doing her best to appear as if she were well. The doctor seemed satisfied with her answer, and he went on with his examination.

"Now, Polly, I want you to take a deep breath."

Polly did as she was told, and her chest expanded as she took the breath. The doctor listened to her chest, and then he nodded.

"Your lungs are clear, Polly. You'll be all right in a day or two."

"Thank you, doctor," said Polly. She was grateful for the good news, and she tried not to show it on her face. She knew that the doctor was only doing his best to make her feel better, but she couldn't help feeling relieved that the operation had been successful.

The doctor gave her a prescription for a cough syrup, and then he left the room. Polly went to the window, and she looked out at the snow-covered world outside. She was glad to be alive, and she knew that she would be all right in a day or two.

Her Gallant Cavalier

By George Buchanan

"I THINK of chivalry and gallantry," said Ethel Hunt, "and I love Ethel, unmitigated and uncontrived.

"Humph! said Aunt Sara. "I've heard girls talk so only when they have a cleft ended in one word."

"I wish Ethel were here," said Ethel Hunt, coloring up to her eyelids. "I only mean of my own. I know I have a right to be as affectionate as I want, but I don't want to be as affectionate as I am."

Now Ethel was not a little girl, but a young lady of some standing in the community. And Ethel Hunt was not only a young lady of some standing, but she was also a girl who knew her own mind.

"Don't be too affectionate, Ethel," said Aunt Sara. "You must remember that I'm not a young lady who can be as affectionate as she wants, but I'm a young lady who must be as affectionate as she is.

The two ladies were sitting in the parlor, and they were talking about a party that was to be given that evening. Ethel Hunt was going to be there, and she was going to be Ethel, unmitigated and uncontrived.

"I wish Ethel were here," said Ethel Hunt, coloring up to her eyelids. "I only mean of my own. I know I have a right to be as affectionate as I want, but I don't want to be as affectionate as I am.

The Artist’s Battalions.

Thrice was I led to take up a pen and write. Miss Louise A. Degenkolbe, Treasurer for the South End Society of Christian Endeavor, Chicago, Ill., has been in the habit of sending me a card of invitation to the annual meeting of the society. I have been a member of this society for many years, and have always been pleased to receive her letter of invitation.

Louise A., how queer is your reason? I am sure, dear friend, that you have some reason for writing to me. You have written to me many times before, and I always read your letters with the greatest interest.

Dear Miss Louise A.,

I am glad to receive your letter of invitation to the annual meeting of the South End Society of Christian Endeavor. I have always been a member of this society, and have always been pleased to receive your letter of invitation. I am very sorry that I cannot attend the meeting, as I am very busy at present.

I hope that you will have a very successful meeting, and that you will do all that you can to promote the work of the society.

Yours truly,

Miss Lillie Degenkolbe, Treasurer South Society of Christian Endeavor, 314 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham’s Vegetable Compound.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—When life looked brightest to me I had a hard fall and internal complications were the result. It was very likely infected, and hard to feel that I could walk, and lastly, I spent money during without any help, which was a great to have a home. She was so enthusiastic about Lydia E. Pinkham’s Vegetable Compound, having used it herself, that she preferred not to be a bottle. I have thanked 300 FORS.

Please not to be a woman.”—Little M. H., since it is brought blessed me to health, and have been well, until a fall in 1930. I am a friend suffering from a heart disease, and have been in a hospital. I am sure that the doctor could see to health, and I am grateful to our friends and the Pinkham Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all her friends to write her, and all her friends are grateful for her hospitality. Andrew, Lyman, E.,

BACHELOR'S BLISS.

The following day, Mr. H. L. Devey, who had been in the hospital for examination, was discharged and returned to his home. He had been suffering from a serious illness, but it was now apparent that he had recovered sufficiently to resume his former occupation as a pharmacist.

The operation was performed by Dr. Devey, head of the department of medicine at the hospital. He had been consulting on the case for several days and had been watching the patient closely. The condition of the patient had been steadily improving, and the doctor was confident that he would make a complete recovery.

The operation was successful, and the patient was expected to make a rapid recovery. The doctor was pleased with the results and expressed his gratitude to the staff of the hospital for their care and attention.

The patient was discharged from the hospital on the following day, and he returned to his home, where he was cared for by his family until he was able to resume his normal activities.

The operation was a success, and the patient was expected to make a complete recovery. The doctor was pleased with the results and expressed his gratitude to the staff of the hospital for their care and attention.
